

Aspects of the daily life in the Roman time at the North of the Danube with a special reference to leather and textiles (Summary)

Daily life in the Roman provinces at the Lower Danube has not been a topic for the scholars till now. Within the finds of textile and leather and the related crafts are fields of research still to be discovered. This paper intends only to bring this reality into discussion and to present a few of the finds from this area in order to show the potential of the archaeological material of the region. For the demonstration of the potential of the categories of finds related to the topic (depictions, specific tools and installations, finds of textile and leather), several examples from the Western provinces of the Roman Empire are mentioned and illustrated.
