Abstract:

The present approach was started following a debate with Mr. I. Stîngă about the military vicus from Drobeta. In that debate Mr. Stîngă insisted on an area wich was totally impossible to be the right surface in wich the military vicus has emerged.

In my approach I demonstrate, following analogies from empire and C. S. Sommer typology, that the military vicus ought to have another point of genesis, namely in the north west of the porta principalis dextra of Roman military camp from Drobeta somewhere close, yet north, of the baths.

The study had to rely on a brief theoretical basis to assist in the demonstration, the main source of study is the typology proposed by C. S. Sommer typology that helps us to establish the core of the civil settlement.
