Abstract: The main purpose of this study is to analyse archaeological, epigraphic and numismatic data regarding the limes sector between Moesia and Dacia. Doing so, we can assert that due to free dacians attack in the time of Antoninus (probably in 143-144) a large number of previously abandoned forts were garrisoned with detachments from Legion VII Claudia and Legion IIII Flavia; these forts were abandoned immediately after the conquest of Dacia in 106 and thirty years later were garrisoned again against the newly threats. Detachments from same legions are present in forts from Dacia reinforcing the existent garrisons; this is the situation in the forts from Pojejena, Drobeta and Bumbesti and due to their temporary character never changed the juridical status of the Danube northern shore still under the governor of Dacia's jurisdiction.*
